An Opportunity for all Nurses and Midwifes undertaking doctoral studies in Europe

Are you:

1. A registered nurse or midwife?
2. A national from a European State?*
3. Aiming to develop a career in research?
4. At an early stage of your doctoral studies in nursing or other health related discipline?

If you meet the four criteria above you are eligible to apply for the European Academy of Nursing Science (EANS) Summer School Programme.

What is the EANS Summer School Programme?

- A unique opportunity for nurses undertaking doctoral studies to participate in a three year programme of annual summer schools.
- The chance to learn mixed methods research skills to develop, test, evaluate and implement complex interventions in nursing.
- The experience of working alongside nurses from more than 20 European countries.

Participants must attend three consecutive summer schools held across Europe. In year one, the summer school is two weeks long, in years two and three it is for one week. Applicants will only be accepted from nurses who commit to attend all three years 2013-2015.

The 2013 summer school will be from 24th June to 5th July, in Nijmegen, The Netherlands. Subsequent venues will be announced closer to the date.

Funding: There is no registration fee for the Summer School. Summer Schools are partially supported by a European Science Foundation Research Network Programme, funded by Research Councils and Academies from eight different European countries – 'REFLECTION' www.reflection-network.eu. Participants should expect to meet approximately 50% of their accommodation costs and all their travel and subsistence.

How to apply. Complete and return the application form available at:
